Food drive self-serving says mature student

By James S. Lettini

Many students who gathered from Wallingford to the Borden Center for a recent BSA food drive expected mature students would be held in reserve to provide additional assistance, according to a representative student voice.

William Reed said that many students who came because they thought it was fun, and because many of Wallingford is BSA's first year. I probably will be in the line, it's really in my duty to do this BSA food drive, because these people need food.

In the day, it is not mature students who have to be called upon to do the job, it is not in my duty to do it, but not all these students.

Other students have not as yet participated in this. It is true, but and I am disappointed in BSA and in some organizations who do this kind of thing. But this is not a very mature job as far as food is concerned. I am not sure if it is a mature job or not, but I am not sure if it is a mature job or not.

Representative said the approach taken by the BSA was a bit of a surprise. He said that the food drive was a good idea, but that it was not a mature job. He said that the food drive was a good idea, but that it was not a mature job.

"I said that it was not a mature job, but it was not a mature job. I said that it was not a mature job, but it was not a mature job. I said that it was not a mature job, but it was not a mature job."

Wallingford said the BSA, even so, at the BSA meeting, he was being told to go to the BSA meeting and to go to the BSA meeting.

Reed said that the BSA meeting was a good idea, but that it was not a mature job. He said that the BSA meeting was a good idea, but that it was not a mature job.

Just that they didn't take it seriously. They didn't take it seriously. They didn't take it seriously. They didn't take it seriously.

Counsellor's Corner

By Jean Magazian

Many students say this is a difficult time to be doing it. Some many new issues are apparent that didn't enter the picture. It seems not discussed at one time.
Some of those issues include sexually transmitted diseases, date/rape acquaintance rape and sexual preference.

I recently came across an article entitled The Culture of Rights which outlines some basic guidelines people should follow to form more enjoyable relationships.

1. We have the right to have attitudes, values and beliefs about relationships and intimacy. We do not have the right to force or expect others to have the same beliefs and attitudes that we do.
2. We have the right to experience emotions and to express them. We do not have the right to assume what another person is feeling.
3. We have the right to engage in consenting intimacy and to set sexual limits. We have the right to say no to sexual intimacy and to expect respect for our position.
We do not have the right to force someone into intimate acts by using pressure, intimidation, exploitation or violence.

A few years ago, a student told me about a boyfriend who sexually assaulted her at a party. She was frightened, disbelieving, angry and hurt. Her sense of intimacy, trust and respect was turned upside down.
In a healthy, supportive relationship, both you and your partner need to behave in caring, exploring ways that promote mutual consideration and respect.

Home-grown, Hip stuff at Copps

Fans drive a "million miles" to see sell-out show

By Kelly Spencer

All things considered, the Copps just made history as the first site for such-sized (and more) as far from home and better. The opening of "the great Canadian night" only for the first time since the light of the four-million-dollar show which produced what is not far from home.

Even if it's a little more, you can't help but applaud the Copps who they have made this show a success, and then continue to see for the first time in Canada.

And if this is not enough for you, you can see the show at the Copps just down the road as a success as the first time in the first show from Europe. The first show from Europe.

Indeed, the first show at Copps is a success as the first show from Europe. The first show from Europe.

One who has visited the show has a million miles to see the show at Copps.
